A native journal states that some little while ago, Mr. Shibusawa proposed to establish a spinning factory and, with the view of raising the necessary capital, travelled through Aichi, Osaka, and other central towns, but met with no suo cess. It will be remembered that the sum of 600,000 yen, subscribed by the nobles for the purchase of the Tokio railway, but afterwards applied to establish the Tokio Marine Insurance Company: was raised almost entirely through interest on this now amounts to 110,000 yen and it is proposed that with some additional capital, it shall be applied towards the establishment of a spinning factory. The Choya Shimbun says :- At a recent meet

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

In a late issue the Straits Times traverses my when passing through Singapore en route to or even conjecture. The story as I told itcame from the highest dinner table, botel, store, and other places days, and was sad is fully and generally believed standing. No blame was attached to Governor that the more hauteur indulged in towards notive dignitaries the higher would be the respect inspired toward Great Britain. Nor am I disposed to consider this advice unsound as applied to the petty officials of the Javan and Peninsular States. But the ruler and nobles of Siam are not ignorant and pempous barbarians decked out in jewels and gold, and with no thought beyond their acquisition and display They are educated and polished gentlemen trained on the European systems, accustomed to the society of foreigners of ability, rank, and best of them. Above all things they excel in courtesy and politeness of demeanour. invariably givil and conrisons to all foreigners with whom they are brought in contact, and they feel naturally that they have a right to expect the same treatment from others. The breaches of stiquette complained of were not of a serious nature in European eyes, but in theirs, accustomed to yield much, they were more so. Instead of receiving H.E. the Minister at he door of the apartment on his arrival, and accompanying him to it on his departure, Governor Veld is said to have remained at his chair and only to have advanced three steps from it to greet him, as Her Majesty or the Kuiser migh have done. Now this in Siamese eyes would appear to be scant courtesy. The King Siam, when giving andience to an Ambassador always meets him at the door of the audience room, conducts him to his seat, and escorts him t the door on his retiring. Surely he had a right to expect the same attention to his Ambassador at the hands of the Governor of a netty dependency of an ally. Again, it is asserted that the Governor did not return the Minister's call, and stopping at the house of a Chinese, a clas Chinese, is a very respectable merubant and have the entree of Government House, and I fail to see that any serious detriment could have been sustained by the gobernatorial dignity in return-plicity believed in by the native and foreign population bers. If they are incorrect the responsicility rests in very high native quarters. That the Minister was seriously autoved at reception and its concomitants is shown by his refusal to dine at Government House (a convanient stomach-nche being his excuse) and hi sending his subordinates to represent him on that opcasion. These are the facts of the case as

TWENTY PORT. Growers and merchants hailed that memorable year as one that must spread the reputation of their wares, as it went far towards as black as ink; it was full of naturally formed alcohol, and of all the vinous constituents, to their minute domestic requirements. most of them far beyond the analysis of the ablest chemist, which go to make of wing a liquor differing from all other liquors." But its brilliant merits actually compromised the growers, by introducing their best customers to an exceptional standard of excellence; Theoceforward would be connoisseurs, insisted upon a dark, sweet, and slightly spirituous wine before everything; and the . gennine vintages of the Douro are ordinarily of a bright ruby tint. So the merchants had to doctor to suit the market; through Mr. Crawfurd maintains, as a matter within his knowledge; that the doctoring was always done as innocuously as possible. Logwood was never used, for the simple reason that it is a dye that would not answer the purpose. Dried elderberries were outployed; but the clderberry is harmless; and brandy was infused more freely than before, in order to check the formentation of the must. But those who object to the introduction of such foreign elements as elderberries may take comfort from the information that they are gone out of use with a change in the fashion. The traditions of the 1820 wine, with its more or less spurious imitations, have been steadily dying out; and now the public are content with port of the natural carnet colour. And if they do desire to have it darker, it is found that, in practice, "there is a much cheaper decand a far more beautiful one always at hand in Portugal; it is the natural colour of the darker varieties of
